If the present "campaign of education," as political reformers are especially fond of calling it, do not Tennyson wrote his poem, "A Church, Leyden, result in a heavy increase of insanity before the end of election day, it will not be fault of the eminent cit'zens who deal in the confusing business of statistics.

With Commissioner Peck, on the one hand, deducing illusory prosperity under the McKinley Bill from the rose-colored reports of annony mous manufacturers; and with Mr. Edward Atkinson drawfng an opposite conclusion from bewildering array of "tables," "diagrams" and such isoth rmal lines of argument, the plain citizen may be pardoned for longing to take to the woods with a parting malediction on the science of num-

"Figures do not lie," quatha! Possibly not; but somebody lies when two compilers arrive at diametrically opposite results by the aid of the same innocent and candid numerals. For example, some years ago, an ardent champion o vaccination furnished true figures from a certain German district which had had an epidemic of small pox. The tables showed that while only 5 or 6 per cent. of deaths occurred among patients who had been vaccinated, exactly 100 per cent. of the non-vaccinated and succumbed to the disease, The statistics were as obvious and impressive as one of Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge's of comparative Abilityuntil a special person took the trouble to make a close inquiry, when he learned that there had been only a single case of smallpox among the non-vaccinated in the district; that the solitary victim was a man over eighty years of age; and that he died-the whole 100 per cent. of him -- beyond a doubt.

It is quite possible that Prof. J . J. McCook has paid more attention to percentages than to qualifying circumstances, in his paper on "The Alarming Proportion of Venal Votes," in the September Forum. We know of no reason to impeach his honesty; but we strong ly doubt the accuracy of his knowledge and the value of his deductions, when he says, substantially. that one in five of the voters in Connecticut are bought and sold: that 56 per cent. of those venal per cent, of German, etc., are among the purchasable element,

The Rev. William Elliot Griffia a well-known Congregational cler gyman of Boston, contributes to last week's Independent a suggestive article entitled "The American in Holland," inspired by his own great moral principle is involved in recent observations in that interesting country.
